A GRIPPING MEMOIR OF MIRACULOUS SURVIVAL OVER UNBELIEVABLE ODDS

Minneapolis, MN (11/7/2011) – So Far to Run is the first-ever memoir written by a woman of the hunted Krahn tribe, the same tribe as Samuel K. Doe, the president of Liberia, who was brutally murdered during a revolution the U.S. State Department called, “one of Africa's bloodiest civil wars.”

At the age of seven, Louise became a domestic servant in Monrovia, living under harsh conditions to secure an education. Just as she was entering college, Liberia was overrun by deadly and injurious rebels, causing Louise to have to run for her life. So Far to Run is Louise’s first-hand account of triumph over unbelievable odds during the over ten years she spent on the run.

So Far to Run—with its heartfelt, honest, and raw narration—is a captivating and inspiring true story that paints a deeply holistic picture of the Liberian Civil War; a war in which over 200,000 innocent people lost their lives, and thousands of others were wounded and maimed.

Louise Barton currently resides in Atlanta, Georgia. In addition to being an avid advocate and supporter of those who remain refugees unable to return to their homes, Louise often appears publicly to promote awareness of their plight. It is Louise’s sincere hope that her engrossing tale will inspire and encourage you to prevail against any obstacles that may come your way.
